DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE AND INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Academic Goals

- 1. Our education will help students acquire expert knowledge on political phenomena.
- 2. Our education will seek academic excellence through active research and lectures.
- 3. Our education will contribute to society and community by training specialists of political affairs.

Fields of Study

- Master's Degree Program Political Science and International Relations Political Thoughts Comparative Politics International Relations
- Doctoral Degree Program Political Thoughts Comparative Politics International Relations

Degree Requirements

- Doctoral and master's degree candidates must pass a preliminary departmental examination before submitting their dissertations to the examination committee. In the preliminary examination, a committee consisting of full-time professors evaluates the quality of dissertation proposals.
- 2. Students in the master's degree program must earn 9 credits or more from their major field of study and 3 credits each or more from the other fields of study. Including credits from other departments, the total credits should be more than 24 credits. This applies to all incoming students from Spring 2017.
- 3. Students in the doctoral degree program must earn 9 credits or more from their major field of study and 3 credits each or more from the other fields of study. Including credits from other departments, the total credits should be more than 30 credits. This applies to all incoming students from Spring 2021.
- 4. Students in the combined master's and doctorate degree program must earn 9 credits or more from their major field of study and 3 credits each or more from the other fields of study. Including credits from other departments, the total credits should be more than 48 credits. This applies to all incoming students from Spring 2021.

- 5. In order to submit his/her dissertation, a doctoral student must have a published or forthcoming paper in an academic journal listed in SSCI/SCI/A&HCI/KCI. If the paper does not indicate its main author, the department head must confirm that the student played a primary role in completing the paper. Only one person is recognized as main author for each paper. This requirement applies to students entering the program in Fall 2009 or later.
- 6. Students in the master's degree program should choose only Political Science and International Relations as their major field of study for the first two semesters. They must change their field of study to Political Thoughts, Comparative Politics, or International Relations at the beginning of their third semester in the program. This requirement applies to students entering the program in Spring 2017 or later.
- 7. All students in the master's, doctoral, and combined master's and doctorate degree program are encouraged to take the department's basic common course. Among the department's basic common course, POL503(Comparative Politics Theory) is regarded as Comparative Politics major course; POL506(International Politics Approach) is regarded as International Relations major course; POL509(History of Political Thought) is regarded as Political Thoughts. This requirement applies to students entering the program in Spring 2017 or later.

Comprehensive Examination

- 1. For the fields of Political Thoughts and Comparative Politics, the comprehensive examination consists of one question each from the basic common course (POL 503, 509) and the sub-fields. For the field of International Relations, professors who offered the graduate courses during the previous two semesters will write one exam question per professor based on his/her courses.
- 2. Students must answer three questions from their major field of study, and one question from each other field of study.
- 3. Students in the master's degree program should complete more than 12 credits which include 6 credits or more from their major field of study and 3 credits each or more from other fields of study.
- 4. Students in the doctoral program should complete more than 21 credits which include 9 credits or more from their major field of study and 3 credits each or more from other fields of study.
- 5. Students in the combined master's and doctorate degree program should complete more than 30 credits which include 9 credits or more from their major field of study and 3 credits each or more from other fields of study.

Addendum

Article1. These bylaws apply to all incoming students from Fall 2015.

Article2. Comprehensive Examination-Article 2 applies to students entering the program in Fall 2017 or later. For students who entered before Fall 2017, if the field that did not pass is their major, they should choose 3 questions from their major field of study. If the field that did not pass is not their major, they should choose 1 question of the field.
